

Journal of Democracy

Since its first appearance in 1990, the Journal of Democracy has established itself as a leading voice in discussions of the problems and prospects of democracy around the world. The Journal explores in depth every aspect of the establishment, consolidation and maintenance of democracy, including political institutions, parties and elections, civil society, ethnic conflict, economic reform, public opinion, the role of the media, federalism and constitutionalism. It covers not only practical political matters but also questions of democratic theory and culture.

In addition to publishing articles on every region of the world, the Journal features reviews of important books on democracy, reports on recent elections, excerpts from speeches by leading democrats and democratic dissidents, and news about the activities of prodemocracy groups worldwide. The Journal's authors include eminent social scientists and historians, statesmen and leaders of democratic movements, and renowned intellectuals. While maintaining the highest scholarly standards, it is written and edited for the general reader as well. The Journal is a truly global publication, attracting both authors and readers from all over the world.

In 2010 the Journal examined the progress of democratization in the post-communist world since the fall of the Berlin Wall (with Jacques Rupnik, Ivan Krastev, Alina Mungiu-Pippidi, Vladimir Tismaneanu, Ghia Nodia, Charles H. Fairbanks, Jr., and Lilia Shevtsova—January); analyzed the challenges to democracy in Central America (with J. Mark Ruhl, Anita Isaacs, and Mitchell A. Seligson and John A. Booth—April); assessed political trends in Afghanistan and Iraq (with Zalmay Khalilzad, Scott Worden, and Adeed Dawisha—July); and discussed the democracy-support and development-aid communities (with Thomas Carothers, Brian Levy, and Kenneth Wollack and K. Scott Hubli—October).

The 2010 issues also included an article on the state of U.S. civic engagement by Thomas Sander and Robert Putnam (January); an analysis of how democratic societies deal with deep divisions by Nathan Glazer (April); an assessment of Ukraine's 2010 election by Henry Hale and Gwendolyn Sasse (July); and an examination of how technology can undercut or promote the power of authoritarian regimes by Ronald Deibert and Rafal Rohozinski (October).

Selected essays originally published in the Journal of Democracy have been collected into a series of books edited by Marc F. Plattner and Larry Diamond and published by the Johns Hopkins University Press. Journal of Democracy books and articles are used widely in university courses on political science, international affairs, and sociology. The newest volumes in the series, Debates on Democratization (edited by Larry Diamond, Marc F. Plattner, and Philip J. Costopoulos) and Democratization in Africa: Progress and Retreat, 2nd edition, appeared in 2010. Two new volumes will appear in late 2011: Poverty, Inequality and Democracy and Liberation Technology: New Media and the Struggle for Democracy. Other published Journal of Democracy books include:

- Debates on Democratization (2010) (with Philip J. Costopoulos)
- Democratization in Africa: Progress and Retreat, 2nd ed. (2010)
